[1048575 rows x 4 columns]

The dataset contains 4 columns (features) and 1048575 rows. As seen in the "sentence" column contain a lot of Null (NaN) values. In order to ensure biased results, we need to get rid of Null values. We calculate the number of words and Null values across the datframe.

[ ]: # check how many rows have NaNs
     data.isnull().sum()
```

```
[ ]: Sentence #    1000616

Filling NaN valuesv : In order to get rid of NaN cells, we use ffill method. This method will impute null values with its preceeding values.

Now we extract the words and create a list of words from all sentences and corresponding tags for sentences.

word_list = list(set(data['Word'].values))
number_of_words = len(word_list)
```

list_of_tags = list(set(data['Tag'].values))#iob2 tags

0.1 Retrieve Sentences and it's Tags

```python

                                                           s['Tag'].values.
   →tolist())]
        self.grouped = self.data.groupby('Sentence #').apply(agg_func) self.sentences = [s for s in self.grouped]
```

```python
get_sentence = retriever(data)
sentences = get_sentence.sentences
```

```python

```python

Giving each word and tag an index (Define mappings between sentences and tags)
Next, we will assign each words and tags a unique id, so that we can do appropriate mapping for training/testing set.

```python
word_id = {w: i for i, w in enumerate(word_list)}
print (word_id)
```
